

“Go Ye unto all the World”

as of Sept 12, 2010

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints has made inroads into so many different heritages and cultures just within the English language that there are many members of the church from many different 'musical languages' not represented in the LDS hymnal. Members of many congregations were raised with different styles and genres of hymns and Gospel music that they have to 'leave behind' when they join with an LDS congregation.

My dream hymnal would be a “Volume Two” to the current LDS Hymnal titled “GO YE UNTO ALL THE WORLD”; hymns from these many heritages, cultures, and musical languages that are compatible with LDS doctrine but because they are of a different musical style than what we normally sing at church they were 'left behind' – hymns from Sacred Harp (Shape Note), from Southern, Country, and Folk Gospel, and of course both Spirituals and 'Negro' Spirituals. There are also grand old hymns from the 'mother countries' that would be appreciated by members who can't seem to find their favorite childhood hymns in our current hymnal. There are also Praise Songs that have stood the test of time and proved themselves a tool for worship. And let's not forget a few movies songs that have proved themselves. And, there are regionally-patriotic songs that would fit into this dream hymnal with great ease.

The key to my dream hymnal is that the texts are doctrinally compatible with LDS doctrine but the music style is one that has not made inroads to our current hymnal. (And there are probably members who pray they never do...)

Hymns are listed by titles/first lines with further explanation in parenthesis. Names in quotation marks are tune names - some of the hymns found in the current hymnal are sung to equally-enjoyable tunes that many would have grown up with before being introduced to the tunes in the LDS hymnal.

In the hymnal world, texts are listed by their first line – I have done this for the most part, but have also listed others by the title they are universally known by. I have listed several texts under both the first line and the well-known title – just to make it easier for some readers.

In my dream, local leaders would be free to choose which of these hymns would be compatible for use in worship services within the culture, heritage, and musical language of their congregation. Naturally, members could use them outside worship services to their heart's content.

Watch for this list to grow as I explore the vast world of hymns ...
